Regardless of whether anyone thinks the sport of weightlifting is a strength sport or speed sport, the snatch and clean and the jerk take a specific time in motion to complete and those times must be maintained from about 80% to 100% of effort. If these times are not maintained the lift will be missed. In my opinion this makes the sport of weightlifting a speed sport. The fact that the implement used increases in mass or resistance makes no matter, because those elements of velocity must stay intact. Slower overall times (from the platform to standing up) result in the lifter not being able to lift up to their full capabilities, if those times are not as fast as the lifter is able to achieve. If the sport of weightlifting is a speed sport then it should follow that the assistance lifts should also be trained as if they were also a speed sport. If the assistance lifts are viewed as slow lifts then slow is exactly how the lifter will be training and that will be reflected in the snatch and clean and the jerk. The slower grinding squats and pulls will effect the velocity of the 1st pull and standing up with the weight out of the clean primarily. It will also effect the depth of the dip in the jerk and the amount of velocity that can be produced in the drive. Regardless of how much anyone thinks slower decelerated squats with maximal weights help the lifter, this is a grave misunderstanding of the laws of physics. All slower squats must be interpolated back to what that squat would be equivalent to in terms of the snatch and clean times in motion which is 1 second. The major difference between a 1RM back squat of 150k @ 2 seconds and a 1 second squat is 50k of non-beneficial overloading with the 150k squat and the probability that the overall time in the clean will be slower and the drive in the dip will be less effective. Almost every day, we come in contact with and eat foods of various categories and types. Eating and staying healthy and strong requires that the foods we eat are safe. The keys to food safety lie in handling, storage, and controlling time and temperature throughout the flow of food, and practicing good personal hygiene to prevent contamination and cross-contamination. The main food safety concern for any food service establishment or restaurant and the general public is the risk of food borne illness outbreak, which may cost lives, huge amount of medical bills, and the disruption of business flow and family functions that are embarrassing to everyone. Therefore, it is important to follow proper procedures that focus on these areas as you walk through the road of eliminating or reducing pathogens (bacteria that make people sick) in your foods and environment to a safe level. An indispensable resource for professionals who work with multiple state tax jurisdictions, this reference offers return preparation guidance for use by taxpayers subject to corporate income or income-based taxes in more than one state.
