Much to the relief of prospective attorneys, it is possible to become an attorney within four to seven years. Albeit uncommon among law schools, some law schools do not even require applications to possess a Bachelor's Degree before apply to enroll in their law school programs. Most law schools will however require applications to at least possess a Bachelor's Degree before they apply to enroll in their law school programs. Moreover, law schools also require applications to have already passed the Law School Admission Test, also known as the LSAT, before applying to enroll in their law school programs. If you are keen on becoming an attorney in four years then it would be viably possible, especially if you are able to completely handle the onerous burden of completing seven years worth of academic requirements to become an attorney within a four years time window. The life of an attorney is not for the faint of heart and is fraught with struggles when competing in a hyper competitive legal services market. If your legal services brand lacks robust brand recognition, strong brand loyalty, and substantial brand equity then it will be all the more challenging to stay afloat in a hyper competitive legal services market. Attorneys often work long hours for law firms and also can be granted the autonomy to work remotely by their employer. In the event that a client needs work to get done before a deadline elapses then attorneys may have to work for sixty to one hundred hours per week and even resort to succumbing to working throughout the late hours of the night in order to be able to meet their deadlines during an ineffably stressful crunch time. Attorneys have ample responsibilities and need to be able to meet or exceed their client's expectations in a hyper competitive legal services market in order to retain clients. Yi Hwang (1501-1570), better known by his pen name T'oegye, is generally considered Korea's preeminent Neo-Confucian scholar. The Ten Diagrams on Sage Learning is his final masterpiece, a distillation of the learning and practice of a lifetime, and one of the most important works of Korean Neo-Confucianism. In it he crystallized the essence of Neo-Confucian philosophy and spiritual practice in ten brief chapters that begin with the grand vision of the universe and conclude with a description of a well-lived day. In To Become a Sage, Michael Kalton supplements a superb translation of this pivotal text with useful commentary that will greatly enhance its value and interest to the lay reader. The Ten Diagrams is the first complete primary text of Korean Neo-Confucianism to be translated into English. Korea's Yi Dynasty (1392-1910), the only East Asian regime founded exclusively under Neo-Confucian auspices, was unique in its allegiance to the orthodox Ch'eng Chu school, predominant in China, Korea, and Japan. Although the Ten Diagrams is a relatively short work, it fully presents the entire vision of Neo-Confucianism as framed in that school. Kalton provides a brief history of Neo-Confucianism in China and Korea as well as commentary that includes extensive passages from T'oegye's voluminous personal correspondence. These annotations expand the meaning distilled in each chapter. They help the uninitiated reader understand the basic elements of the complex Ch'eng Chu school of Neo-Confucianism, while enabling the scholar to distinguish characteristic aspects of Korean Neo-Confucianism as presented in the thought of the nation's leading philosopher of the time.
